

Satisfaction with Catering Tourism Education

Štefan Bojnec

Drago Papler

Faculty of Management in Koper, University of Primorska

Abstract

Education is an important factor in tourism development in the Gorenjska region. The catering and tourism secondary school in Radovljica, which is analysed in this paper, aims to be integrated into improvements in the quality of supply of tourist products and services in the sustainable development of the Gorenjska tourist destination and particularly for the education of employees in tourism. The quantitative analysis is based on the conducted survey analysis. With summary statistics, regression analysis and factor analysis, we investigate the motivation for the decision for the enrolment into the catering and tourism school in association with the opportunities for the continuation of education and employment and labour market developments. We evaluate tourist education programmes regarding the satisfaction of scholars with the knowledge gained and practical experiences. With factor analysis, we identify the common factors and the most important weights of variables to derive managerial implications to improve the school image for the enrolment and satisfaction of students for catering tourism education.

Key words: tourism, education, employment, sustainable development, Gorenjska, Slovenia.